Short Bio:

Daniel is a Ph.D. candidate in Management Sciences at Esade Business School. Before pursuing an academic career, he was working as a project manager in the electric vehicle industry.

He holds a B.Sc. in Operations and Supply Chain Management from ESB Business School and a M.A. in Digital Business and Innovation Management from Muenster School of Business.

His research interests focus on the exploitation of workers in domestic and global value chains. More specifically, his research interests lie at the intersection of labor and product supply chains and related implications for (in) decent work from the perspective of the affected humans.
