Short Bio:

Jabar is a Ph.D. candidate in Strategic Management at Esade Business School. He holds a Master of Research in Management from ESADE and an MSc in Entrepreneurship from University of Tehran. Before pursuing an academic career, he worked as a business developer for 10 years.

His research interests focus on firm scaling strategies. More specifically, he examines the conditions that lead to variation in the timing, speed, and trajectories of firm scaling, and how these differences affect firm performance. His work has been accepted for presentation at several conferences, including Academy of Management Annual Meeting, Strategic Management Society, Wharton School Corporate Strategy and Innovation, Canadian Council for Small Business & Entrepreneurship. He received the Best Paper Award at the Canadian Council for Small Business and Entrepreneurship Annual Conference.
