

WORKSHOP 1:

“ESG in the boardroom”

OBJECTIVE

Environmental, social, and governance (ESG) performance is already an important criterion in the evaluation and decision making of shareholders, investors, and financiers. Given the significant impact of ESG performance on the present and future of corporations, boards of directors increasingly see ESG issues as key business risks and opportunities when defining corporate strategy. In this workshop, we discuss how to approach key social and environmental aspects in board meetings and sustainability committees.

CONTENT

1. Why ESG issues are important on the board agenda: their impact on the balance sheet and income statement.
2. Risks and opportunities of climate change, and the role of boards of directors.
3. The importance of supply chain management on the board agenda. New demands and responsibilities for boards.
4. How to address people and talent management issues: responsible people management and the inclusion of ESG issues in the remuneration model.
5. What should be the agenda and dynamics of a sustainability committee.
